ABOUT THE PROJECT

Project Nguzo, is an initiative premised on the United Nation Women's Commission on the Status of Women (CSW), year 2024 priority theme, 'to improve social protection systems for gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls', as well as the Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) number five. *Nguzo*¹ was birthed out of need in 2021. It was a response to the plight of vulnerable women who could not support themselves for reasons of losing bread winners, or extreme conditions of poverty, rendering it difficult for them to feed themselves and their households. The ultimate goal of the project is to improve the quality of life and social well-being of vulnerable women (widows), through market-vested socio-economic interventions in food security, income generation, and climate resilience.

Food distribution is just but the first step in responding to the immediate need (hunger). The long-term plan is to slowly graduate the support into a life-skills training, enterprise development mentorship (to start/strengthen small enterprises (SMEs), and civic education model, for empowering the women, and turning them into even stronger pillars of their households and communities.

More than half of Africa's women are under-resourced, living in largely agrarian societies. They play a critical role in contributing to the continent's agriculture and rural enterprises, which in turn fuel local and global economies. According to UN Women, (2023)², a majority of women (13.1 million) in Kenya live in rural areas and make up approximately 75% of the agricultural labour force, placing rural women and girls at the heart of Africa's development. According to the Loomba Foundation's World Widows Report, (2024)³, Kenya had an estimated 8 million widows, with the country placed 33rd on a list of countries with the harshest environments for widows.

During the 2021-2024 reporting period, Nguzo distributed food packs to 237 women in Busia, Bungoma, and Kakamega counties, Kenya. Key challenges included; limited logistical capacity causing the work to run slowly, economic inflation, leading to reduction in number of women reached, or cuts to the supplied rations, and lack of data and tracking resources. This report provides some key highlights of achievements in the intervening period.

¹ In recognition of the centrality of the women's efforts within their households, the project was code-named 'Nguzo', a Swahili word for pillar, or the archetypical center-pole that holds the traditional African round huts in place.

STRENGTHENING ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL SUPPORT SYSTEMS FOR VULNERABLE RURAL WOMEN THROUGH FOOD DISTRIBUTION (PROJECT - NGUZO)

Empowering rural widowed women through food distribution for improved social protection systems for gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls

Project Nguzo is a local food distribution project by Africa Initiative for Rural Development (AiRD), and like-minded partners, targeting widowed households with food and personal effects in Western Kenya.

The delivery model involves targeting the most vulnerable members (widows, economically vulnerable single womenled households, and orphaned children) through various community insitutions such as religious, community development, and local government administration systems, in order to reach the needy with food supplies, training and mentorship in life skills, enterprise development services, and civic education.

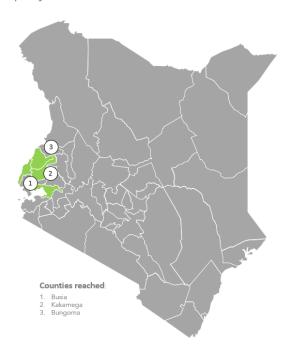

The intervention aims to strengthen the existing economic and social protection systems from which they derive their livelihoods and economic sustenance. In the first phase, the project aimed at reaching vulnerable widows with food supplies in order to address the most pressing economic needs. Subsequent phases will seek to expand the support by introducing a training and mentorship component for developing small businesses that can cater to the women's most immediate food needs on a sustainable basis. Whereas the first phase was philanthropic, the second will seek to extend capacity strengthening services within a market-context so as to empower women to start and run small businesses that can support their daily requirements sustainably. This will be done in collaboration with other development, private and public sector partners operating in the same target regions.

Counties

The project currently reaches women in Kakamega, Bungoma, and Busia counties in western Kenya.

Selection criteria

The project targeted vulnerable women who showed interest in the project, and who had been seconded to the program by a trusted community agent who knew them, including, but not limited to local chiefs, religious organizations, and other previous or ongoing development programs by different partners. They included;

- Widows
- Economically vulnerable single women-led households
- Elderly women
- Orphaned children
- Women living with disability (PLWD) or chronic diseases (LWCD)

The women were seconded to the project during sensitization meetings held in build-up to the distribution exercises.

SDGs supported include:

2 End hunger, achieve food security and improved nutrition and promote sustainable agriculture

3 Ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all at all age

4 Ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all

5 Achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls

Strengthen the means of implementation and revitalize the Global Partnership for Sustainable Development

ACHIEVEMENTS

During the intervening period (2021-2024), a total 237 vulnerable women were reached with food packs valued at KES 1.3 million, with KES 903,772 (i.e. 68.3% of total support), going directly to the beneficiaries, while the difference covered operational costs (transport, local movements by food trucks and motor-bike deliveries).

According to the Central Bank of Kenya (2024)⁴, the country experienced heightened economic inflation between 2020 and 2024 (Figure 2). During the same period, the shilling weakened against major currencies (Figure 3). The macro-economic factors led to an increase in price of consumables over the period. In order to maintain, improve, or scale the food-packs, the investment needs to grow.

The above results were achieved with the help of partners, through mutual and complementary partnership with local churches, overseas religious ministries (British Isles Prophetic partners, Invictus Kingdom Ministries), and local county government agents. Their partnership enabled the AiRD team to go beyond what had been planned.

Challenges

- Limited scope to leverage progressive development intervention models that empower local communities through commercial enterprise support.
- Cumbersome logistics with limited possibility for scaling.

- Given the African cultural context, women still face an uphill task with access, control, and appropriation of land, capital, entrepreneurial, and household resources, thereby holding back their potential.
- Other extra-spiritual needs and challenges observed during the intervention include; low incomes, lack of quality inputs and other ancillary enterprise support services, poor financial literacy, limited legal safety net or support towards appropriating their societal rights to property (land and other factors of production leading to lack of collateral to access credit), and lack of access to critical civic education, leading to political exploitation.

Lessons learnt, and insights

- Execute both short-term (i.e. continued supply of food gifts/stamps) and long-term (i.e. enterprise support) interventions, to help the vulnerable women achieve their livelihood aspirations, in a respectful environment. We propose a gradual shift from foodpack distribution to a more sustainable model comprising a comprehensive capacity strengthening program to enhance financial literacy, develop small enterprises, initiate linkages to other critical value chain services, and to help them appropriate their civic responsibilities sustainably. The ambition is to move the women from a point of dependence on 'handouts' to one where they are empowered and in charge of their personal, and household affairs.
- Embed the proposed enterprise support approach in market-

- systems to achieve sustainability, and reduce logistical encumbrances when scaling across new counties.
- Institute a civic education program to inform women of their civic entitlements, sources of legal support, and to improve relations with local government agencies, who should ideally be their closest allies.
- Leverage other financing mechanisms that can benefit women, including but not limited to; County government women enterprise funds, Central government procurement opportunity quotas reserved for women in business, and UN Women funding opportunities such as the UN Women EntreprenHER programme for empowering women in business.

CONCLUSION

Nguzo is a project for empowering rural widowed women through food distribution, and economic empowerment mentorship, in order to improve social protection systems for gender equality and the empowerment of women and the girl child. The geographical scope covered included Bungoma, Busia, and Kakamega counties in Kenya. During the intervention period, the project reached 237 widowed households with food and personal effect packs valued at KES 903,772.

During the intervening period (2021-2024), a total 237 vulnerable women, among them 12 PLWDs, were reached with food supplies valued at KES 1.3 million, with 68.3% of total support going directly to the beneficiary, while the difference catered for operational expenses such as; transport, and out-of-office expenses for the supporting team.

Rising inflation in the past 5 years resulted in weakening of the local currency, leading to increased cost of living and sky-rocketing food prices. This meant that over time, rations had to be reduced to maintain all the on-boarded women. An increase in the investment will be required to maintain the existing women, at the very least, and more so, to scale.

Partnership with local organizations, development agencies, and other likeminded collaborators, made it possible for the implementing team to go beyond what was initially planned.

Key challenges included; limited scope to leverage progressive, market-embedded development interventions models which employed commercial enterprise support approaches to growth; logistical limitations; a disempowering cultural context, and lack of access to critical civic education services. It is recommended that the project shifts from food distribution to a more sustainable market-embedded enterprise development support model. Such a model would support scaling, and promote economic sustainability of the interventions.
